

January 24, 2012 Senate Question Period

Question from Senator Young for the Principal for upcoming Senate Meeting.

The AUCC has revised its Academic Freedom statement and has been criticized for narrowing the scope of previous editions. The University of Toronto has pointed to their own academic freedom statement as a preferable position. In fact, the QUFA Collective Agreement provides more protection than the AUCC document. Where does Queen's stand on this issue? Which document would you endorse as a better position to hold?

Written response from Principal Woolf to be provided at the February 28, 2012 Senate meeting
