From the University Advisor on Equity

It is my pleasure to provide the Equity Office’s 2009 Year in Review.

Over the past year we have streamlined our administrative functions, both in this office and in the processes that we administer on behalf of the University. Examples of this are the new Equity Training Application (ET-App) as well as the online Equity Reporting Forms application for new faculty hires. With each new enhancement, we endeavour to meet our mandate in a more efficient manner.

We continue to be active in our employment equity training and compliance role. To get a picture of the University’s progress, we invite you to check out the second in our Achieving Equity series, Snapshots. We are busy putting the finishing touches on the Canadian Race Inquiry Journal; watch for the launch of the first issue in the coming year.

Enjoy this issue of the Year in Review. You can find the Equity Office website at www.queensu.ca.equity. You may also contact us by email at: equity@queensu.ca.

New Braille Labeler

In keeping with our commitment to providing accessible publications, the Office of the Provost and Vice-Principal (Academic) has generously donated the funds to allow the Equity Office to acquire a Braille labeller. Please do not hesitate to contact this office should you wish to discuss placing Braille labels on your publications.
1. Educational Equity

Senate Educational Equity Committee (SEEC)

The SEEC met seven times during the 2008-2009 academic year. The majority of the Committee’s focus was reviewing the Educational Equity Policy statement and accompanying report. On November 26, 2009 Senate approved the Queen’s University Educational Equity Policy to replace the existing Educational Equity Policy Statement approved by Senate on April 19, 2001. The full policy statement may be accessed at:

In addition to the work mentioned above, the SEEC also:

- Continued to monitor, discuss and advise on appropriate responses to racial incidents on campus
- Responded to and discussed the viability of programs on campus such as the Queen’s National Scholar (QNS) program and the Intergroup Facilitators Program
- Discussed general developments on equity, diversity and racism such as the USAT accessibility issues, the research proposal on “Best Practices” in educational equity and the naming of Robert Sutherland Hall (formerly the Policy Studies Building)
- Reviewed and discussed various reports such as the Breslauer Report and the Henry Report

2008/2009 Student Applicant Equity Census

The 2008/2009 results of the Queen’s Student Applicant Equity Census are shown below. A summary table of the annual census results from 2003 to 2009 is available on the Institutional Research and Planning website. Percentages shown are for the 30.5% of applicants who returned the survey.

Journal of Critical Race Inquiry

Founded in 2009, the Journal of Critical Race Inquiry (CRI) is a peer-reviewed, bi-annual, open-access electronic journal. It uses an interdisciplinary approach to feature current research, thought-provoking debate, and innovative inquiry into critical race issues.

The Journal defines ‘race’ as a social construct that has no biological basis. It sees the concept of ‘race’ as fluid, changing and culturally specific.

Aim and Scope

The Journal of Critical Race Inquiry recognizes the interlocking nature of oppression and its intersectionality based on race, gender, social class, sexual orientation, ability, age, religion, ethnicity, regionalism etc. The journal aims to provide a foundation for Canadian scholarship on race within a North American context.

The focus of the Journal is on the social, educational, economic and cultural experiences of diasporic racialized bodies. From this lens, the journal recognizes both the convergence and divergence of the experiences of Indigenous/Aboriginal/First Nations/Métis/Inuit peoples with those of racially marginalized individuals.

“This is one of the first peer-reviewed journals of its sort in Canada. Its mandate is to foster the dissemination of scholarship on critical perspectives on the study of ‘race’ in myriad theoretical methodological and empirical contexts. This journal also welcomes work that explores themes and topics in Indigeneity, and how they simultaneously challenge, enrich and shape the works of critical race scholars.”

2. Employment Equity

Council on Employment Equity (CEE)

In 2008-2009, the Council on Employment Equity participated in and supported the following activities aimed at advancing employment equity:

- Reviewing and distributing a series of booklets and pamphlets communicating with the Queen’s community about employment equity matters, including the recently published Achieving Equity II: Snapshots.
- Redesigning the Equity Office’s Exit Survey tool and administration process.
- Updating the I Count Queen’s Equity Census to include questions on gender identity and LGBTQ status.
- Examining the impact of Bill 168 on current University policies and procedures regarding personal harassment.

Achieving Employment Equity at Queen’s Part 2: Snapshots

In December 2009, The Council on Employment Equity and the Equity Office were pleased to announce the release of the publication, Achieving Employment Equity at Queen’s Part 2: Snapshots. This report is the second in a four-part series of joint publications by the Equity Office and the Council on Employment Equity, highlighting employment equity at Queen’s University. The first publication, Achieving Employment Equity at Queen’s Part 1: Challenges, outlines our institution’s employment equity obligations under the Federal Contractors Program (FCP). Our goal in releasing Achieving Employment Equity at Queen’s Part 2 is to inform the Queen’s community about the progress being made at Queen’s in employment equity and the challenges we still face in achieving our equity goals. The publication is available at:

Equity Training

The Equity Office offered fourteen training sessions under the Queen’s University Faculty Association (QUFA) Collective Agreement (CA) responsibilities in 2009. Of these, ten sessions were general training for Faculty Appointments/RTPC committee members and four sessions were for Employment Equity Representatives.

Throughout 2009, 122 faculty, staff and students participated in the training workshops offered by the Equity Office. Enrolment in each workshop was capped at 20 participants to ensure opportunity for interaction and dialogue.

There were 56 hiring processes subject to the training regulations outlined in Article 24.4 of the Collective Agreement. Of these 56 committees, 37 complied with all training requirements.

In 2009, the Equity Office hired a computer programmer to work on several desktop applications, one of them being the Equity Training Application (ET-App). The ET-App is a desktop application that facilitates the management of Employment Equity Workshops in several ways, including administering, querying and reporting on both Workshops and Registrants. The ET-App makes the administration of equity workshops more efficient by minimizing the paper work that had been required to administer the workshops, saving time, effort and the environment. What this means to the broader community is that we are able to better track and access information on training participants in order to ensure compliance with the QUFA Collective Agreement and the University’s goals for its employment equity program. As well, it allows for faster and more accurate dissemination of information to departments engaged in the appointments, tenure and renewal processes and an easier registration process for participants.

Equity Reporting

An annual compliance report from the Equity Office to the Joint Committee on the Administration of the Agreement (JCAA) documents the progress made in meeting the goals of the Articles in the Collective Agreement. Of the faculty hired in 2009, 73.2% of appointments committees were compliant in submitting equity reporting forms, compared to 86% in 2008.

The compliance rate is lower due to the inclusion of Sessional Adjuncts (now called Term Adjuncts) in the CA. If we were to exclude the Term Adjuncts from the statistics, the return rate would be 100%. Departments are now required to follow the equity provisions in the CA for these positions however, the existing process does not always fit well for this category. More work needs to be done to facilitate compliance in this area, for example, the creation of a dedicated form for adjuncts.

Data Collection

Through the I Count Queen’s Equity Census, Queen’s University collects self-identification data on all new staff joining the organization. The Census was sent out five times in 2009 to a total of 435 new employees.

In 2009, the Equity Office, in collaboration with the Council on Employment Equity and the Human Rights office, revised the I Count Queen’s Equity Census to include questions on gender identity and sexual orientation. The revised Census will be sent electronically to all employees in the Fall of 2010. The University recognizes that there are groups outside of the four Federal Contractors Program designated groups (women, Aboriginal Peoples, persons with disabilities, visible minorities) that have also encountered barriers in the workplace which limit their full and active participation. The inclusion of gender identity and sexual orientation questions in the I Count Queen’s Equity Census signifies the University’s recognition of the historical marginalization of the LGBTQ community and its commitment to a discrimination-free workplace that is supportive and respectful of employees with diverse backgrounds.

Throughout 2009 the Equity Office worked with Information Technology Services (ITS) to create an online Equity Reporting Forms application for new faculty hires. The paper-based process that currently exists is inefficient for both the Equity Office and the Employment Equity Representatives. Although the system is still in the testing phase, most of the functionality exists. Below is a screen shot of the Main Menu Dashboard:

Equity Exit Survey

To help ensure that we meet our commitment to employment equity, all exiting employees have an opportunity to complete an Equity Exit Survey. Throughout 2009, the Equity Office, in collaboration with the Council on Employment Equity, worked on revising the survey process as well as the content of the survey. This new process should be finalized in 2010. You can find more information regarding the Equity Exit Survey at: http://www.queensu.ca/equity/content.php?page=ExitSurvey

Of the employees who left the University in 2009, 56% were women, 1.3% were Aboriginal people, 3.6% were persons with disabilities and 11.3% were visible minorities/racialized persons.
3. Accessibility

The Queen's Accessibility Committee (QAC)

The Queen's Accessibility Committee brings together community members and representatives of various University groups to provide assistance to Queen's University in its goal of full accessibility for persons with disabilities. The Committee receives its mandate from the Vice Principals. In 2009, the QAC provided advice on the:

- Annual Accessibility Plan
- Customer Service Training Program
- Physical Accessibility Audit
- Steve Cutway Accessibility Award
- Physical accessibility improvement projects for completion with the 2008 Renovation/Alteration Fund

The Steve Cutway Accessibility Award

Principal Williams presented the Steve Cutway Accessibility Award to Christine Fader, a career counselor at Career Services. Established in 2008, the award recognizes outstanding contributions by staff and faculty to advancing accessibility for persons with disabilities. It is named in honour of the first recipient, Steve Cutway, a long-serving staff member at Queen's.

“I am very surprised and honoured to receive this award,” says Ms. Fader, “and I would like to acknowledge the many people with disabilities who contribute every day to the Queen’s and world communities.” She draws her inspiration from seeing how small, individual changes can make systemic differences when adopted by many. She stays motivated by realizing “there are many contributions we continue to miss out on because of barriers that prevent many people with disabilities from participating fully in daily life.” Ms. Fader has been instrumental in bringing disability and accessibility issues into the mainstream planning at Career Services, says Kathy Jackson, chair of the Queen’s Accessibility Committee. Ms. Fader has designed workshops on disability issues, initiated and facilitated a career day for employers recruiting students with disabilities, and overall, demonstrates a strong personal commitment to accessibility issues.

Enable Project

On December 10, 2009, the Council of Ontario Universities distributed English language online training modules (interactive and accessible versions) to all Ontario universities. Queen’s University managed this project, named the Enable project, working with e-learning firm GEVC and collaborating with university colleagues from across the province. With oversight by Ontario’s Accessibility Directorate, the modules were designed to train university staff, faculty and student leaders in accessible customer service for persons with disabilities. The French modules are slated for delivery in January 2010.

Accessible Customer Service

Much energy this year has been dedicated to developing and delivering training in accessible customer service. This training is required by the accessible customer service standard, a standard under the Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act (AODA), 2005. Since May 2009, over 200 Deans, Department and Unit Heads and Managers participated in specially designed training sessions. Attendees learned about delivering services to persons with disabilities in a way that takes into account their accessibility needs as well as the particular responsibilities administrators have for ensuring the University achieves compliance with Ontario’s accessibility legislation.

On December 14, 2009, the Equity Office assisted the University in launching the online training program (the Enable project) in accessible customer service to all faculty and staff. As of January 15, 2010, over 3000 faculty and staff had commenced the training with approximately 2000 having completed it.

Accessible Information and Communication

On May 1, 2009, the Information and Communication Standard Development Committee submitted to the Minister of Community and Social Services a proposed standard for accessibility. Queen’s University served as the representative for the Council of Ontario Universities on that committee. The Minister communicated her intentions to pursue Cabinet approval of the proposed standard by midyear, 2010.

Considerable effort has been made to improve accessibility of information and communication at Queen’s in anticipation of the requirements in the accessible information and communication standard. This will also allow the University to meet the requirement in the customer service standard to “communicate with persons with disabilities in a way that takes into account their disability.”
What to expect in 2010……

SGPS Climate Survey

Queen’s endeavors to provide a positive, welcoming environment for all of its students and employees, so the Equity Office staff have been assisting the Society of Graduate and Professional Students in designing a Graduate Student Climate Survey. The objective of the survey is to gather information about barriers graduate students may have encountered at Queen’s relating to discrimination, harassment and/or accommodation. The draft survey will be presented to the Senate Educational Equity Committee in early 2010.

Achieving Employment Equity at Queen’s Part 3: Through the Years

Launch of Journal of Critical Race Inquiry (CRI)

There will be a soft launch of CRI at the Congress of Humanities and Social Sciences at Concordia University in May 2010.

The purpose of this soft launch is to tell our colleagues about the development of CRI, invite their submissions, distribute promotional materials and highlight the papers in our first issue.

The official launch will take place at Queen’s early in the 2010-2011 academic year.

….and so much more!
