

The Department of Political Studies & the Centre for the Study of Democracy and Diversity present:

When Cities Were Sovereign: Tolerantia a Civic Compromise in the Medieval City

Loren King
Wilfrid Laurier University

Tuesday, September 26, 2017
2:30 pm – 4:00 pm
Mackintosh-Corry Hall, Rm. D214

Loren King is an associate professor of political science at Wilfrid Laurier University. His interests are primarily in political philosophy and the human sciences, specifically problems of rationality, the structure and properties of attractive normative theories, and questions of justice and legitimacy in urban and global governance. He has further interests in statistics, data science, and water stewardship. Loren is a principal at Mercator Analytics, and a founding member of the Great Lakes Trust, which awards seed grants supporting science, art, and advocacy for the Canadian Great Lakes. He received his doctorate in 2001 from M.I.T.

