☞ Sir Thomas Wyatt (ca. 1503-1542)

- born to a family of wealth and status; became a valued member of King Henry VIII's court
- his diplomatic career took him to various parts of Europe, including Italy, where he may have been influenced by Italian sonneteers
- fell out with Henry VIII owing to a past relationship with Anne Boleyn; was twice imprisoned in the Tower of London
- few of his poems were published in his lifetime, but many later appeared in Tottel's Miscellany (1557) (P 34)

 Sir Thomas Wyatt (ca. 1503-1542)

Sir Thomas Wyatt
[The long love that in my thought doth harbour]

The long love that in my thought doth harbour
And in mine heart doth keep his residence
Into my face presseth with bold pretence
And therein campeth, spreading his banner.
She that me learneth to love and suffer
And will that my trust and lust's negligence
Be reined by reason, shame, and reverence,
With his hardiness taketh displeasure.
Wherewithal unto the heart's forest he fleeth,
Leaving his enterprise with pain and cry,
And there him hideth and not appeareth.
What may I do when my master feareth,
But in the field with him to live and die?
For good is the life ending faithfully.

1557

Theme

- “not [the] subject [of a work] but rather [the] central idea, which may be stated directly or indirectly (Cuddon 721)
- “an idea about the world, expressed by a literary text, of general importance to people (Headrick 26)
- “an abstract concept that is made concrete” through an analysis of the Elements of Literature (SF 3)
- “must go beyond naming the concept ... and assert what the work is saying about it” (4)

Sir Thomas Wyatt
[The long love that in my thought doth harbour]

The long love that in my thought doth harbour
