

SOCIOLOGY

Fields of Research

The program reflects the special expertise of the staff faculty and utilizes the unique facilities offered by the Kingston community. The program reflects the special expertise in the following areas:

- Critical Sociological Theory, including Marxism and Critical Race Theory
- Deviance and Criminology (especially among young offenders)
- Criminal Justice and Policing
- Feminist Sociology
- Social Movements
- Sociology of Cities and Urban Sociology
- Sociology of Law
- Sociology of Sport
- Cybersecurity and Surveillance
- Science and Technology Studies
- Digital Media and Culture
- Visual Culture

Research Methods

The Graduate program is divided into three fields:

- Power, Inequalities and Social Justice;
- Criminology and Law; Media
- Information and Surveillance.

Financial Assistance

The minimum guaranteed funding package for Ph.D. students is $23,000 per year for four years and $16,000 for MA students per year for two years. Successful candidates are guaranteed annual funding for up to 2 years for Master's students and up to 4 years for Ph.D. students. Master's students receive a minimum of $16,000 for years 1 and 2 of their program and Ph.D. students receive a minimum of $23,000 for years 1 to 4 of their program.

Departmental Facilities

The Stauffer Library contains a well-developed collection of nineteenth, twentieth and twenty first century Canadian books, newspapers, periodicals and government documents. It subscribes electronically to most major journals.

The United Nations Documents Library contains the reports of many international bodies. The Law Library and the Health Sciences Library have substantial collections pertinent to the sociological study of these areas.

Resources in Gender Studies include library holdings of over 5,000 volumes. The Ban Righ Foundation provides weekly programs and serves as a resource centre for women.

Students in Sociology can draw upon the resources of the many professional Faculties and Schools which are at Queen's including Law, Medicine, Education, Kinesiology and Health Studies, Policy Studies, Environmental Studies, Urban and Regional Planning, Public Administration, Business, and the Industrial Relations Centre.

These cooperative relationships, together with a provision that enables students to take courses in other departments within the Faculty of Arts and Science, provide the opportunity for interdisciplinary scholarly work. The interdisciplinary Surveillance Studies Centre is located within the department, providing many resources for graduate students within Sociology and other departments.

Faculty

Head

Hand, M.

Coordinator of Graduate Studies

Sytsma, V.A.

Professor

Baron, S.B., Burfoot, A.¹, Kay, F., Hand, M.

Associate Professor, Möllers, N.T.², Myers, N.M.³, Sytsma, V.A.

Assistant Professor

Abrams, T.J., Golriz, G., Husain, F., Saulnier, A.,

Professor Emeritus

Beamish, R.B., Hamilton, R., Lele, J.K., Lyon, D., Mosco, V., Pearce, F., Sacco, V., Silverman, R., Snider, L., Zureik, E.T.

Cross-Appointed

Adams, M.L., Goebel, A., Jefremovas, V., King, S., Sismondo, S., Soederberg, S., Taylor, M.E.

¹ On Administrative Leave July 2022-June 2023

² On Leave July 2022 – April 2024

³ On Academic Leave July 2022 – June 2023

Programs of Study

Applications for the M.A. and Ph.D. programs should be made in accordance with the general regulations of the School of Graduate Studies.

- Sociology - Doctor of Philosophy (<https://queensu-ca-public.courseleaf.com/graduate-studies/programs-study/sociology/sociology-phd/>)
- Sociology - Master of Arts (<https://queensu-ca-public.courseleaf.com/graduate-studies/programs-study/sociology/sociology-ma/>)

Courses

All courses are 3.0 credit units, except SOCY 898, 899 and 999, which are 6.0 credit units.

SOCY 881,891,892,893,894,895,896,897 Directed Special Studies

Courses arranged especially for those whose interests are not met by other courses.

SOCY 898 Master's Essay Research

Required in Program ii.

SOCY 899 Master's Thesis Research

Required in Program i.

SOCY 900 Professional and Pedagogical Skills

This course is designed to acquaint doctoral students with some aspects of the teaching and research responsibilities of a sociologist and faculty member. It has both theoretical and practical components, and will cover course planning, presentation and preparation as well as planning, organizing, funding and publishing research. Grading is on a Pass/Fail basis. Course is compulsory for doctoral students and is offered every other year. Three term hours. Not offered 2022-23.

SOCY 901 Sociological Theory

Core Course: All M.A. and Ph.D. students will normally be required to take this course. Ph.D. students who have already taken the course shall choose an appropriate replacement in consultation with the Graduate Coordinator. This course critically examines the main tenets of contemporary sociological theory. Key sociological concepts are studied in a variety of contexts spanning from the micro to macro levels of social action. Although heavily reliant on the main historical developments in sociology (Marx, Weber and Durkheim), emphasis is placed on post Second World War II developments in sociological theory. Three term hours. Fall; M. Hand.

SOCY 902 Sociological Methodology

All M.A. and Ph.D. students will normally be required to take this course. Ph.D. students who have already taken the course shall choose an appropriate replacement in consultation with the Graduate Coordinator. This course deals with the main contemporary methodological approaches to the explanation of social phenomena. It will critically examine the strengths and weaknesses of the major strategies of social research (qualitative, quantitative and historical). The selection of specific problems areas may vary from year to year. Three term hours. Fall; V. Sytsma

SOCY 903 Surveillance Studies

Surveillance is sociologically significant as a central means of governance. Surveillance is both a cultural and technical invention, especially dependent today on digital infrastructures and neo liberal policy. Personal data are gathered by many means and processed to create categories by which risks and opportunities are assessed, and through which people's life chances and choices are influenced and managed. Three term hours. Not offered 2022-23.

SOCY 911 Contemporary Sociological Theory

This course enables an advanced engagement with contemporary sociology. It will focus on recent developments in sociological theorizing, directing these toward specific problem areas. The precise topics will vary from year to year in response to instructor expertise, student interest and need. Not offered 2022-23.

SOCY 916 Qualitative Methodology

Three term hours. Winter; G. Golriz.

SOCY 917 Quantitative Methodology

This course serves as an introduction to a broad range of quantitative methods typically employed in the Social Sciences in a manner suitable for students at the graduate level. Students will learn to prepare data for analysis, carry out analyses, and interpret research results using a variety of statistical techniques. Students will be acquainted with the assumptions that are made while employing various methods, as well as the problems that arise with the use of such methods. Three term hours. Fall; V. Sytsma.

SOCY 918 Current Developments in Socio Legal Theory

This course will focus upon a variety of macro, middle and micro level theories in the socio legal area. The emphasis will be on historical and comparative critical analysis and evaluation using appropriate empirical evidence and studies. Not offered 2022-23.

SOCY 919 Current Developments in Socio Legal Methodology

SOCY 920 Advanced Issues in Socio Legal Studies

This course will examine issues and controversies in the socio legal area. Topics will vary, but may include some or all of the following: corporate crime, victimology, crime and the elderly, feminist criminology. Three term hours. Winter; S. Baron.

SOCY 921 The Social Construction of Science and Technology

The evolution of science and technology is neither linear nor cumulative. By drawing upon theories of sociology of science and technology, the course argues through the use of case studies that, like other forms of knowledge, scientific and technical knowledge is socially constructed and is embedded in general social relations. Not offered 2022-23.

SOCY 925 Feminist Sociological Theory

This course deals with feminist critiques of sociological theories, how such theories have been revised and appropriated by feminists and the various perspectives that feminists have developed for interrogating and transforming social hierarchies informed inter alia by gender, class, racism, and heterosexism. Three term hours. Not offered 2022-23.

SOCY 931 New Media Cultures

We live in cultures which are increasingly organized around or saturated with digital information or new media. In this advanced course we will engage with some of the major commentators on relationships between new media and culture, working through a series of key ideas and problems focused around intersections of theory and practice. Instead of maintaining a domination/resistance conception of cultural industries and practices, we will explore complex dynamics of innovation and consumption across a variety of arenas. There will be scope to engage with notions of mobility, speed, reflection, reflexivity, information, virtuality, consumption, in the context of different spaces or objects (city; home; archive; gallery; brand, memory, sounds, visions, events, body, etc.) and practices (photography, art, writing, listening, tourism, learning, etc.) which exemplify contemporary debates about new media in cultural sociology. Three term hours. Not offered 2022-23.

SOCY 932 Transnational Theories of Race, Gender and Sexuality

This course is designed for graduate students interested in questions surrounding the construction and perpetuation of categories of social difference. It explores current theories of concerning social relations of race, gender, ethnicity, sexuality, class and other dimensions of difference, and the ways in which these social relations are intersecting and interlocking. The aim of this course is to bring an intersectional analysis to contemporary social concerns, but also to ground that analysis historically. These questions are addressed through a range of theoretical approaches, including critical race theory, transnational feminism, anti racist feminism, anti racist theory, postcolonial theory and queer theory. Not offered 2022-23.

SOCY 934 Special Topics

This course explores a range of special topics in the area of surveillance, critical big data studies, and/or digital media. Topics vary from year to year. See the Departmental Graduate Studies website for details.

SOCY 935 Special Topics

This course explores a range of special topics in the area of criminology or sociolegal studies. Topics vary from year to year. See the Departmental Graduate Studies website for details.

SOCY 936 Special Topics

This course explores a range of special topics in the area of power, inequality and social justice. Topics vary from year to year. See the Departmental Graduate Studies website for details.

SOCY 999 Ph.D. Thesis Research