Improving Client Satisfaction by Focusing on What Is Important

Financial Services (Research Accounting)

In 2015, Financial Services embarked on a review of the Research Accounting service model. The objective of the review is to improve overall service to the research community within the available resources, while not compromising regulatory compliance obligations.

The approach involves incorporating feedback from the Queen’s research community through conducting a client survey and facilitated focus group sessions, as well as benchmarking our service delivery model against other universities to identify best practices that would be effective in improving desired service levels at Queen’s.

To date, a client survey has been conducted and facilitated focus group sessions have been held. The resulting themes and areas for improvement are presented in this report.

The next step in this process is to share the report with faculty offices (business officers, associate deans of research) to provide them an opportunity to validate the findings and to provide any final comments. We will then begin investigating and implementing the opportunities for improvement identified through the survey and focus group sessions (see pages 5 and 6 of this report).

By the Numbers

- 1049 individuals invited to participate in survey and focus groups
- 259 survey respondents
- 7 focus group sessions held
- 25 focus group participants

Overall Themes Highlighted by the Survey and Focus Groups

Structure and Staffing Levels in Research Accounting

In a decentralized support model, it is imperative that Research Accounting and departmental research support personnel work together to support researchers. Equipping research support personnel with training, education, and information needs to be a priority to ensure they are comfortable and feel supported in being first-level support for their researchers.

People generally understand and support how Research Accounting is aligned by funding agency, and do not feel the need for a single point of contact.

There is a recognition that Research Accounting is doing a good job with the resource level in place.

Financial Systems and Reporting

Further enhancements to financial reports and education around interpreting the reports to support decision making at different levels is desired. There is general acknowledgement that FAST is a big improvement, but there still exists a sentiment that systems are difficult to understand, and that PIs don’t have the skills or time to do financial work.

Delivering, or pushing, financial reports is desired by some, and the feeling is that there would be more review of reports if this were to happen.

There is a sense that there has been a “downloading” of administrative burden to PIs.

Most people seem to understand that TRAQ and FAST/PeopleSoft exist for very different purposes, and don’t feel there is a need to integrate them.

Training & Communications

The training and communication needs and wants vary significantly between stakeholder groups.

PIs seem to desire short, just-in-time, online training to accomplish tasks as easily as possible. Research administrators want more face-to-face sessions and opportunities to learn from Research Accounting as well as each other.

Communications need to be targeted, with short messaging and additional information if desired.

Observations

Services rated in the top 3 in terms of importance had satisfaction ratings of 65% or higher.

Differences exist between stakeholders in terms of what is most and least important.

PIs rated training and individualized support as least important, while Business Officers considered this to be very important.
Opportunities for Improvement

Through the client survey responses, general themes and areas where stakeholders want to see change became evident. Through focus group sessions, these areas were explored in more depth to fully understand what changes and/or enhancements could be made that would make a positive difference.
