

Art of Research Photo Contest 2023 – Congratulations Wilson!

Geography and Planning's Wai Yin (Wilson) Cheung has been awarded a top prize in this year's Art of Research photo contest! Wilson's time-lapse movie, Frozen in Time: Unveiling the Mysteries of Turner Glacier through Glaciological Research in Akshayuk Pass, was named winner in the "Research in Motion" category of the competition. The video captures glaciological research on Turner Glacier in Akshayuk Pass, which involves studying the physical properties and behavior of the glacier, as well as the surrounding environment, to better understand the dynamics of this glacial system.

To watch the movie and learn more about Wilson's submission and the other winners in this year's contest, please visit The beauty of Queen's research – photo essay, published in the Queen's Gazette. Well done, Wilson!

DR. GRACE ADENIYI-OGUNYANKIN NAMED FELLOW OF THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE FOR ADVANCED RESEARCH

The Canadian Institute for Advanced Research (CIFAR) has launched a new program, Humanity's Urban Future, to understand what it will take to build successful cities. Dr. Grace Adeniyi-Ogunyankin, faculty member in the Departments of Geography & Planning and Gender Studies, has been named a CIFAR Fellow of this new program. Grace will work together with researchers from around the globe to study how metropolitan centres have changed over time and space, with the goal of engaging policy makers, political advisors, and civic actors for future social impact.

To learn more about Dr. Adeniyi-Ogunyankin's accomplishment and hear Grace speak about the Humanity's Urban Future program, please read "Designing the city of the future", published in the Queen's Gazette. Congratulations, Grace!
