

Course Name GNDS 311 – Feminist Thought Contact Hours/Delivery Method This course will run asynchronously (no scheduled lectures).	Course Instructor Dr. Grace Adeniyi-Ogunyankin
Course Description We begin the course by first asking the questions: What is theory? Who gets to participate in theory building? How is feminist knowledge production influenced by power, privilege and geopolitics? Next, we trouble the history of Western feminism and engage with the debates on the challenges of universalizing feminism. To this end, we will explore the ways in which feminism is multi-vocal, non-linear, and influenced by multiple and shifting sites of feminist identities. This exploration includes the examination and analysis of local and global feminist thoughts on gender, oppression, colonialism, race, sexuality, disability, reproductive justice, kinship, and the politics of death.	Required Course Materials <ul style="list-style-type: none"> All assigned readings will be available on the e-reserve.
