

The Department of Gender Studies at Queen's University invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position at the rank of Assistant Professor in Indigenous Gender, Sexuality and/or Feminist Studies, with a preferred starting date of July 1, 2018.

At the time of appointment, candidates will have completed a PhD or equivalent degree in a relevant field. The main criteria for selection are research and teaching excellence in Indigenous gender, sexuality, and/or feminist studies. We welcome applicants who can conduct and teach Indigenous community-based and social research methods and who prioritize research with Anishinaabe and/or Haudenosaunee peoples on whose territories Queen's University is situated. Scholars who attend to at least one of the following areas are especially encouraged to apply: resource extraction and land defence, violence and anti-violence organizing, health and wellness, Two Spirit issues and identities, global and transnational indigeneity, and decolonization and resurgence.

The successful candidate will provide evidence of high quality scholarly output that demonstrates potential for independent research leading to peer assessed publications and external research funding. The candidate will also have strong potential for outstanding teaching contributions at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Candidates will provide evidence of their ability to teach existing undergraduate courses, including Indigenous Women, Feminism and Resistance and Settler Colonialism and Indigenous Politics, and to develop new courses in their areas of expertise. The successful candidate will be expected to work collaboratively in an interdisciplinary and student-centred environment and to make substantive contributions through service to the department, the Faculty, the University, and/or the broader community.

The University invites applications from all qualified individuals. Queen's is committed to employment equity and diversity in the workplace and welcomes applications from women, visible minorities, Aboriginal peoples, persons with disabilities, and LGBTQ persons. All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, in accordance with Canadian immigration requirements, Canadian citizens and permanent residents of Canada will be given priority.

A complete application consists of:

- a cover letter (including one of the two statements regarding Canadian citizenship / permanent resident status specified in the previous paragraph);
- a current Curriculum Vitae (including a list of publications);
- a statement of research interests;
- a statement of teaching interests and experience (including teaching outlines and evaluations if available);
- a writing sample;
- three letters of reference to be sent directly to Samantha King, Head, gndshead@queensu.ca or in hard copy form to the address below.

The deadline for applications is December 1, 2017. Applicants are encouraged to send all documents in their application package electronically as PDFs to Samantha King at gndshead@queensu.ca, although hard copy applications may be submitted to:

Samantha King, Head
Department of Gender Studies
D506 Mackintosh-Corry Hall
Queen's University
Kingston, Ontario
CANADA K7L 3N6

The University will provide support in its recruitment processes to applicants with disabilities, including accommodation that takes into account an applicant's accessibility needs. If you require accommodation during the interview process, please contact Samantha King in the Department of Gender Studies, at gndshead@queensu.ca or at 613-533-6000 ext. 75030.

Academic staff at Queen's University are governed by a Collective Agreement between the University and the Queen's University Faculty Association (QUFA), which is posted at <http://queensu.ca/facultyrelations/faculty-librarians-and-archivists/collective-agreement> and at <http://www.qufa.ca>.