Course Description
Ethnography is an interdisciplinary method of knowledge production in which researchers learn about people and culture by attending to everyday life. Gender studies scholars use ethnography to create critical feminist, queer and trans knowledge, and scholars across the social sciences and other fields use ethnography to examine gender, sexuality, race, class, nation, disability and all modes of social difference and power.

This seminar introduces feminist and queer ethnography as distinct yet linked scholarly subfields, which constitute bodies of critical theory, literary genres, and methods for creating ethical relationships in research and social life. We will learn how scholars advance trans, queer, and feminist theories by practicing ethnography, as well as how ethnography is understood once taken up with these theoretical lenses. We study the histories of feminist and queer ethnography in anthropology and other social sciences; the ways in which the colonial and racial histories of anthropology and ethnography are confronted and transformed by feminist, queer, and trans researchers; and the importance of critically ethnographic relationships, writing, interpretation, and ethics to theories and methods in gender studies.

Given that many students may be unfamiliar with the scope of these two subfields, we begin by reading a recent textbook in feminist ethnography that bridges into queer ethnography. Ethnographies realize their fullest extent in extended case studies, so we then focus our work on reading ethnographic monographs (single-authored books). Students will read three ethnographies – two assigned, one individually selected – as well as supplementary articles and book chapters.

Required Texts (at Campus Bookstore and Stauffer Library Reserves)
Students read four required books. Books marked with  are online at the Queen’s Library website.

Three books will be read by the entire class:

Feminist Ethnography: Thinking Through Methodologies, Challenges, and Possibilities, Dana-Ain Davis and Christa Craven, Ed. (2016) **

In/Divided Unity: Haudenosaunee Reclamation at Grand River, Theresa McCarthy (2016)
Butch Queens Up In Pumps: Gender, Performance and Ballroom Culture in Detroit, Marlon Bailey (2013)
The remaining book will be assigned from this list. Do not acquire one until one has been assigned to you, but please do review the books on Stauffer Reserves so that you can request your choices.

Filipino Crosscurrents: Geographies of Seafaring, Masculinities, and Globalization, Kale Fajardo (2011)
Global Divas: Filipino Gay Men in Diaspora, Martin F. Manalansan IV (2003) **
Queen for a Day: Transformistas, Beauty Queens and the Performance of Femininity in Venezuela, Marcia Ochoa (2014) **
Queer Activism in India: A Story in the Anthropology of Ethics, Naisargi Dave (2012) **
The River Is In Us: Fighting Toxics in a Mohawk Community, Elizabeth Hoover (2017)

Additional required readings for the Seminar appear on the syllabus.
