

SEMINAR SERIES

The Question of Unworthy Life: Rethinking Nazism's First Genocide

Dr. Dagmar Herzog

Graduate Center, City University of New York

Author photo: ©juergen-bauer.com

Image: May 1944: 98 girls and young women from the Protestant charity institution Asbacher Hütte (Bad Kreuznach) are readied for deportation to the killing center of Meseritz-Obrawalde. Four decades later, the institution issues the very first "confession of guilt" for failing to protest and protect their residents. Printed in Offene Tür 1 (1985), 5. © Diakonie-Anstalten Bad Kreuznach.

Thursday, October 31 @ 11:30 AM

Watson Hall RM 517