

TEACHING FELLOWSHIPS DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY – QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

Posting Date: January 16, 2023.

Closing Date: February 6, 2023.

The Department of History invites applications for Teaching Fellowship positions for Spring/Summer 2023 and Fall/Winter 2023-2024. The process of appointing qualified teaching fellows to these positions is outlined in the Collective Agreement (CA) between PSAC 901 and Queen's University. A full-year (September – April) teaching fellowship is equivalent to 1.0 workload credits. A half-year teaching fellowship (September – December OR January – April) is equivalent to 0.5 workload credits.

All doctoral students currently in Year 3 and above who seek internal financial support for the 2023-2024 academic year must apply for a teaching fellowship. Graduate students in Preference Group A as defined by the CA will have priority for teaching fellow positions. Applicants in other preference groups will be considered depending on the availability of positions. The department will review applications and appoint Teaching Fellows based on teaching and academic experience; priority for a Teaching Fellowship as specified by the CA; and in accordance with funding packages. All positions are subject to availability of funding and total enrollments in the course. Doctoral students currently in Year 2 are encouraged to apply to teach sections of a first-year course, although priority will be given to upper-level students. If you are unsure of your program or funding status, please contact the Chair of Graduate Studies Dr. Andrew Jainchill.

Application Process

Applicants should apply using the link below no later than February 6th, 2023, and they should arrange for their referee to email a brief reference to history.chair@queensu.ca by February 6th, 2023.

As part of the application process, you will be asked to:

- 1) List the courses that you are most interested in teaching next year
- 2) Rank the first-year courses in order of preference
- 3) Provide a draft course title and description if you wish to propose a 'Topics in History' course. Note: the title, description, and other course details will be finalized in consultation with the department.
- 4) Upload an up-to-date curriculum vitae and unofficial transcript
- 5) Upload a one-page statement that describes your teaching experience, interests, and approach. Please include any relevant experience in online teaching if applying for an Arts and Science Online (ASO) course.
- 6) Identify the name of one referee

Complete applications should be submitted via this Microsoft Form:

Courses

The course list below is tentative; the department will not be able to offer all these courses. Please list in order of preference the courses you consider yourself well-qualified to teach. The term in which one-term courses will be taught has not yet been determined (except for the ASO online courses and the first-year courses). Finally, please note that single or multiple sections of first-year courses may be assigned, with two sections equivalent to a 0.5 teaching fellowship.

Course description can be found in the Faculty of Arts and Science's Academic Calendar.

Online:

Online courses are taught through the Arts and Science Online (ASO) Department. These courses are taught fully online and are mostly pre-constructed. These courses do not require instructors to write a traditional syllabus. Small changes to course curriculum may be possible in consultation with the ASO course development team. Typically, these courses are assigned Teaching Assistants (TAs) to support the Teaching Fellow as the main instructor. These courses require instructors to have previous knowledge of onQ and a willingness to engage with the course curriculum as it was previously designed.

First Year Sections:

All first-year courses in the Department of History are delivered in a combination of weekly lectures and weekly seminars. Each course is managed by a faculty member who writes the syllabus, determines the assignments, and gives the weekly lectures. The seminar instruction and the assignment grading are allocated to the teaching fellows. Please note that a 0.5 teaching fellowship consists of two sections of a first-year course.

HIST 104	Pre-Confederation Canada: A History of the Present	0.5	F

Upper Year Seminars:

Upper year seminar courses are reserved for undergraduate History students in their third or fourth year and have a maximum enrolment of 23 students. When assigned to an upper-level seminar course, teaching fellows are responsible for all aspects of the course with support from the Undergraduate Office. Teaching fellows are required to produce a syllabus which includes the weekly reading list and assignment scheme for the course. The syllabus will be approved by the Undergraduate Chair. These courses are offered in either the fall or winter term. There is space to indicate your term preference on the MS application form.

Note: HIST 390, HIST 402 and HIST 403 are "Topics Courses." Each year the department offers a limited number of special topics courses, which change in theme from term to term. These courses allow instructors to offer a course that is not represented by the list of seminar courses above. If you wish to propose a topics course, please include a draft course title and description when prompted on the MS Application Form.

Core Seminars

Core seminars are yearlong courses reserved for undergraduate History students in their second year. These small courses (less than 23 students) provide an in-depth training in historical methods and encourage active discussion among student peers and with the instructor. When assigned to a core seminar course, teaching fellows are responsible for all aspects of the course with support from the Undergraduate Office. Teaching fellows are required to produce a syllabus which includes the weekly reading list and assignment scheme for the course. The syllabus will be approved by the Undergraduate Chair.
