

Department of History Graduate Studies Workshop

Writing During the Pandemic

featuring Adrian Kelly

November 23, 2020

1:00 – 2:00 pm on Teams

Adrian Kelly:

Adrian Michael Kelly is a Research Projects Advisor in Social Sciences, Humanities, and Creative Arts for the Faculty of Arts and Science here at Queen's. He helps faculty in search of funding to define and describe their work, and he also assists with long-term research planning and the development of healthy writing habits. Adrian received his PhD in English with a Creative Writing focus from the University of Calgary. In addition to essays, reviews, and literary journalism, he has published a novel, Down Sterling Road, and a collection of short stories, The Ambassador of What. Currently, he is at work on a memoir. He has taught writing and English literature at colleges and universities worldwide, and also acts as a writing coach. He believes that anyone truly interested in writing can—and should—learn and practice the habits that make it a source of achievement, growth, and joy.

Contact:

For Teams link:
email Cathy Dickison @
dickison@queensu.ca