PREFACE

The interest in federalism and its intergovernmental relationships is well illustrated by the large volume of literature on these matters. This bibliography is an attempt to bring under one cover the vast number of books, pamphlets and articles that have appeared over the past one hundred years. No claim is made that all relevant material has been listed but it is felt that the list is reasonably complete. One important omission is in material which has appeared with increasing frequency in the daily press. To all authors whose works were unfortunately omitted we express our regrets.

The extent of the work, which far exceeded original expectations, and in many cases the unavailability of the material, made it impossible to examine many of the entries individually. For this reason the user may on occasion discover that the classification lacks desirable precision. However, limitations of time and resources did not permit a more detailed indexing.

Many bibliographies have been published from time to time as part of scholarly treaties or independently. To the extent that the latter are pertinent they have been noted here.

The unavailability of material is one of the biggest problems facing the conscientious researcher. It is suggested that the resources of the libraries be used and where necessary inter-library loan facilities be employed. Theses are sometimes difficult to secure but most universities will make them available on request once the author's permission has been obtained.

If practicable, supplements will be issued at three or five year intervals. Any suggestions that would serve to make the bibliography more useful will be welcomed.

Additional copies are available from the Institute at three dollars post-paid.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The present work was made possible through a grant from the INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION OF CANADA and we gratefully acknowledge its generous support.

The purpose of the Institute is to encourage study and development of the processes of public administration among government officials, university teachers, and the public at large.

This bibliography is part of the continuing work of the Institute.
THE INSTITUTE OF INTERGOVERNMENTAL RELATIONS

There is developing in Canada today a greater understanding of the urgent need for a continuing examination of the federal-provincial relationship within the framework of the Canadian constitution. What is now required is a searching, detailed examination of the situation as it exists and as it appears to be developing, in order that workable, coherent and broadly acceptable answers to the pertinent questions may be found.

Useful and effective work has been done, sometimes by individual scholars, but more often within governments themselves. But the situation now more than ever, calls for continuing objective and independent study and research which does not have to accept the limitations of existing governmental policies, federal or provincial. A rational approach of this nature should assist in the more orderly and effective development of intergovernmental relations in Canada through a greater knowledge and understanding and the increased cooperation of all concerned.

The purpose of the Institute of Intergovernmental Relations is to provide a centre for a continuing programme of such study and research. The range will cover constitutional, political, economic, fiscal and administrative questions, both conceptual and practical, that governments in Canada are facing. Attention will be directed to assessing underlying changes in trends in governmental powers and responsibilities as they relate to social, economic and political developments of the times. Wherever it is likely to be fruitful, experience in other countries will be examined.

The Institute is sponsored by Queen's University and is under its general direction. It operates in association with the departments of the University and particularly with the Department of Political Studies. Queen's University has had a long and active association with and interest in the development of Canadian government and in the problems of Canadian federation. In recognition of the growing complexities of our federal system, Queen's now offers the Institute as a means for giving more systematic thought and attention to them.

If the Institute is to meet its aims effectively it must be assured of independent financial support.

Those interested may secure more detailed information as to its work and its objective by writing the Director.
