Update from Dean Crow Sent March 13

Dear students,

I am following up on the communications that were circulated today regarding COVID-19 (https://www.queensu.ca/covidinfo) and would like to highlight the following points:

- Queen’s on-campus and online undergraduate courses are suspended immediately (Friday, March 13) until Friday, March 20. All assessments (exams, tests, essays, labs, etc.) are therefore delayed or canceled during this time.

- After March 23, the academic session will resume. Course material will be provided to you remotely and there will be no on-campus classes. The term will end on April 3, as planned. We will update you on exam delivery and alternatives to exams as soon as possible.

- As a result, there is no requirement for you to be on campus for the remainder of the term.

- Your instructors will communicate with you about the completion of your courses and alternatives to on-campus exams. We are working with your instructors to ensure that you can complete your courses and year, without penalty. Please note that outstanding course-work (exams, tests, essays, labs, etc.) may be reweighted or modified.

- The university is not closing, and operations will continue. To clarify, services will continue and facilities will remain open: for example; residences, libraries, Student Wellness Services, Student Academic Success Services, Athletics and Recreation, and Food and Hospitality.

I sincerely appreciate your patience and understanding at this time. I would like to reassure you that we in the Faculty of Arts and Science are here for you and that our offices will remain open. Please reach out to us if you have questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

Barbara Crow
