ABSTRACT: Virtually all practical digital communications systems in use today include some form of error-control coding scheme. In this talk, I will review the theory and development of error-correcting schemes that can achieve, with practical decoding complexity, a performance approaching the fundamental information-theoretic limits established by Claude E. Shannon over seven decades ago.