Executive Summary

2012 was a growth year for the Queen's Research Data Centre (QRDC). Change was the overarching theme, with new staffing, hardware, software, and networking, along with new administrative and budget structures.

Of particular note, the QRDC budget process has changed as a consequence of the University moving to a new activity-based budgeting model. Under this model, funding for the QRDC has become more institutionalized, with Queen's University Library becoming responsible for managing the RDC's budget in close consultation with Queen's Information Technology Services, and the Office of Research Services.

The QRDC saw 19% activity growth from the previous year. With the departure of our longstanding Statistical Analyst, who was a very active researcher in the QRDC, it is unclear what direction activity levels will take in 2013. Our new Statistical Analyst is working out very well. With active promotion of the RDC, completion of the Active Directory migration project, and the CFI-funded hardware/software changeover, it is hoped that we can continue to grow research activity in the QRDC.

e. Hours of Operation

The Centre is open 18.75 hours per week

10:00 AM until 4:45 PM, Tuesdays – Wednesdays – Thursdays

Closed for lunch 12:45 – 1:15 PM

12 workstations are available to researchers

Section Two: Research Output and Training Activities

Criterion 1: Total Number of Contracts

Table 1: QRDC Summary of the Number of Contracts Started, Completed and Withdrawn
	Contracts Started	Contracts Completed	Contracts Withdrawn
2012	21	13	0

Note: 5 reported in Program Manager's Report, plus 8 more related to Graduate students in a course = 13.

Instructions:

The source for the information in this table is the Program Manager's Report which will be sent to each Centre by Statistics Canada by the end of March of each year.

Definitions

- Started: The count of all the contracts started during the calendar year
Completed: The number of contracts that met their contractual obligations
Withdrawn: The number of contracts that were withdrawn at the request of the principle investigator

Criterion 2: Summary of Project Output

Note: Using “Corrected Student list from Dave Haans.xlsx”, per email of 26 May 2013, changed the number of MA & Hon. Theses from 1 to 12. Included 2 additional Working Papers reported by QRDC, bringing the total to 3 in the table, above.

Instructions:

Source of line 1 (completed projects) is the Program Manager (PM) report.

Source of # of publications (lines 2-9) is the CRDCN Researchers’ Questionnaire, supplied as conditional results in mid-May, plus non-duplicate results for the Annual Report year from the CRDCN Bibliography (<http://rdc-cdr.ca/statistics>) before mid-June, plus any publications obtained by the RDC outside of either. By mid-June, publications will be edited, corrected and completed and made available in the CRDCN Bibliography.

Source of lines 10 and 11 (graduate courses) are from the RDC.

Source of line 12 (conference presentations) is the CRDCN Researchers’ Questionnaire, supplied in mid-May.

Source of lines 13 and 14 (conference organization, conference sessions, etc.) is the RDC.

Box 2a: Summary of Substantive Comments on Publications

QRDC researchers produced a range of articles, working papers, policy papers, and theses in 2012, and gave RDC-based presentations at a number of conferences.

Instructions: Source of information is the CRDCN Researchers' Questionnaire.

Box 2b: Summary of Major Media Coverage of Research

Urban sprawl's relationship to childhood obesity was discussed in the Windsor Star in June 2012. The researchers found a modest relationship between sprawl and self-reported physical activity among 12-19 year olds. There was no relationship found between sprawl and obesity in this age group, Seliske said, even though there is a lot of research suggesting urban sprawl is linked to obesity in adults.

In another article, researchers reported that suburban youth walk and bike more than city peers. The policy goal is to strike a balance between letting kids be active and concerns for their safety.

Vignette 1

Vignette 1: A researcher worked in the QRDC to characterize ‘movers and stayers’ in the context of immigration policy and the mobility of French and English Canadians. Canadians moved to the U.S. in large numbers in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Canadians also moved to settle the Prairies. The researcher merged Canadian and U.S. Census microdata files from 1900 through 1931 to generate a sample of the population of the Canadian-born living in both Canada and the U.S. The researcher then quantified the relative odds of Anglo- and Franco-Canadians moving inter-provincially and to the U.S., and did this for each Census year. This allowed direct comparison of the relative mobility of each group, and changes in mobility over time. A shift was noted in the characteristics of French Canadians moving to the U.S. during the 1920s, that could be due to changes in labour demand or the effect of the literacy requirement introduced by Congress in 1917.

Vignette 2: Targeted employment subsidy programs are commonly employed by governments. A researcher team examinee one such initiative that rebated unemployment insurance premiums for net new insurable employment for youth aged 18 to 24. Using microdata from two datasets to estimate the labour market impacts of this program, researchers found statistically and economically significant impacts of various measures of employment for the targeted age group relative to older age groups. Neither dataset exhibited a concurrent change in unemployment; rather a reduction in those not in the labor force was observed. Oddly, no program impacts are observed for females; all of the effects are for males. Notably, researchers found evidence of displacement – substitution away from slightly older non-subsidized workers towards the younger subsidized group. These spillovers suggest that the aggregate impact of the program is less than that observed for the targeted group.

Instructions: Provide an example of research mobilization in the RDC.

Criterion 7: Summary of Major Achievements and Challenges for the past year

2012 was a challenging year for the Queen's Research Data Centre (QRDC). Just about everything that could change, did – staffing, hardware, software, networking, and administrative structure. We hired a new interim Statistical Analyst, Bin Hu. We started the process of hiring a new Statistical Assistant. I started as the new Academic Director.

We worked hard toward migrating the QRDC hardware, software, and networking to meet the new Windows AD environment required by Statistics Canada. While we didn't complete migration in 2012, much of the key groundwork was done – including getting an approved Network Architecture (July, 2012) and starting detailed migration planning (Fall 2012, with excellent support from Queen's IT Services). 2012 also saw administrative and financial responsibility for the QRDC move from the Economics Department to Queen's University Library.

As the new Academic Director, I spent a lot of time learning how to administer the 2011 PI Survey. This was an often frustrating but always enlightening experience. It opened my eyes to the range of research projects being conducted in the QRDC and elsewhere. When a new online "Researcher Survey" was proposed by CRDCN, I greeted this with enthusiasm and contributed to its development. This report is based in part on results gathered using this new tool. Support from Dave Haans is greatly appreciated in this regard.

In 2012, we developed a new QRDC website, with the goal of increasing transparency (providing access to Annual Reports, and other background documents) as well as fostering a community of researchers (via 'researcher profiles', QRDC Blog, news items, etc).

Criterion 8: Major Objectives and foreseeable Challenges for next year

Looking forward to 2013, there are several activities and challenges on the horizon. These include:

- Completing the QRCD migration project
- Using the QRDC website, workshops, personal communication, and other forms of outreach to promote the QRDC to researchers and departments, and putting the RDC in the context of the broader spectrum of statistical and data resources available at Queen's.
- Promoting the new 'Program of Research' option for RDC researchers.
- Fostering a community of research, using the QRDC website to profile researchers and research projects and to encourage interaction among researchers.
- Refreshing the QRDC Advisory Committee membership and ensuring ongoing communication with this group (two scheduled meetings and emails as needed).
- Confirming the Interim Statistical Analyst
- Hiring a new Statistical Assistant
- Providing feedback on the new online Researcher Survey to improve things for the next year
- In cooperation with QUL, ITS, and ORS, refining administrative process surrounding operation of the QRDC and our relationships with outside agencies (Statistics Canada, SSHRC, CFI, etc.); in particular, adapted the QRDC budget process to work with the University's new activity-based budgeting model.
- Improving the layout of the QRDC (e.g. building a wall to create a meeting room, to minimize disturbances for researchers)
- Working with the Statistical Analyst to become more familiar with the 'researcher experience' in the QRDC, to better respond to researcher needs and concerns

Section Three: RDC Operating Budget – Revenue and Expenses Report for Fiscal Year

NOTE: The QRDC budget process has changed, as the University has moved to a new activity-based budgeting model. Under this model, funding for the QRDC has become more institutionalized, with Queen’s University Library becoming responsible for managing the RDC’s budget, in close consultation with Queen’s Information Technology Services, and the Office of Research Services.
