What are the Grad Maps?

Each grad map provides program-specific information, activities, and resources related to academics, research, experience and network building, and career planning – all laid out in a visual timeline.

The maps provide structure that supports success in their program, and encourages earlier career exploration and preparation to help them navigate and be ready for the broad range of options including academic, alt-ac, and non-academic jobs after graduation.

Where do I find Grad Maps?

Grad Maps are available on the Career Services website: <http://careers.queensu.ca/gradmaps>.

Can Grad Maps be customized?

Yes! We encourage students and supervisors to set goals together. Printable, customizable Grad Maps can be downloaded here: <http://careers.queensu.ca/students/wondering-about-career-options/grad-maps/my-grad-maps>.

The figure is a promotional page for the Cultural Studies M.A. program at Queen's University. It features a header with the program name and a navigation bar. The main content is divided into several sections: 'How do I USE THIS MAP?', 'Why GRADUATE STUDIES IN CULTURAL STUDIES?', 'Why QUEEN'S?', 'Why KINGSTON?', and 'Program STRUCTURE'. The 'How do I USE THIS MAP?' section explains that the map is a guide for students considering a graduate degree in Cultural Studies, highlighting the program's interdisciplinary nature and its focus on social justice. The 'Why GRADUATE STUDIES IN CULTURAL STUDIES?' section discusses the program's commitment to research and its role in addressing contemporary issues. The 'Why QUEEN'S?' section highlights the university's reputation for excellence in research and its commitment to social justice. The 'Why KINGSTON?' section emphasizes the program's location in a vibrant, multicultural city. The 'Program STRUCTURE' section provides an overview of the program's requirements, including coursework, a thesis, and a final project. The page also includes a photograph of students and a list of research areas, such as African Studies, Critical Race Theory, and Indigenous Studies. The bottom of the page features the School of Graduate Studies logo and contact information.
