The Masters in Industrial Relations Mentorship Program

Queen’s MIR Career Committee
Queen’s University School of Policy Studies

The Queen’s MIR Career Committee is excited to introduce a formal mentorship program to Queen’s MIR students and alumni. The MIR Mentorship Program aims to enhance the graduate experience at the Queen’s School of Policy Studies. By matching students in the Master of Industrial Relations program with alumni, the program will provide students with valuable career advice, while mentors get the chance to connect with students and contribute back to their school in a meaningful way.

The volunteer commitment expected from mentors is flexible and would allow students to:

- Gain insight into current trends and challenges in the industry
- Develop professional networks and learn about valuable associations to join
- Participate in job shadowing
- Receive suggestions on winning resumes and cover letters as well as tips for successful job interviews
- Tap into their Mentor’s knowledge and expertise in making effective long-term career decisions
Interested Alumni or LR/HR professionals are invited to make contact with Jennifer Dee, MIR Program Coordinator in the School of Policy Studies at 613-533-6000 x 77322 or deej@queensu.ca Once Alumni have indicated their interest, Ms. Dee will be in touch with them to arrange a pairing with one or two MIR students. Once paired, Alumni are encouraged to meet with their mentees once or twice throughout the academic session and to be in touch with them through email or phone correspondence as they deem fit.

We believe this program will be immensely valuable and rewarding to mentors and students alike and we look forward to connecting with you.
